there'll be a worship service and at 11:15 a.m. lunch will be served. Throughout the weekend, photos will be on display.

Waggoner noted that Peralta United Methodist Church was a mission of the Belen church, sharing a pastor in 1957-58.

The church is sponsoring a Spanish outreach program run by Bolivian immigrant Ben Vicuna with services conducted in Spanish each Sunday. English as a second language course is also being taught.

"Sometimes we don't have enough rooms for people to meet," Armstrong said, with three Girl Scout troops, children's meeting, Seasoned Citizens, men's and women's groups and other activities.

The church sponsors a Phone Tree that makes sure shut-ins or the elderly are called every single day to ensure they're all right.

It supports a child in Mexico, gives gifts to foster children at Christmas and sponsors a bell choir.

Corby Chavez is the music director, Laura Armstrong is in charge of the bell group and Helen Harris has recently been hired as part-time youth director.

Two organists supply music, Allene Compton and Mira Ann Wease. Bea Mountain played for many years for most services.

Armstrong said he's proud of the Watch Me Grow pre-school which has been in operation for about 20 years. Many of the youngsters in attendance are not church members. "A lot of kids just need loving," he said.

And love is what First United Methodist is all about.

Bring Shovel To Methodists' Groundbreaking Ceremony Monday

Admission is free, but a shovel is recommended, for all who attend the New Year's Day groundbreaking ceremonies at 4:30 p. m. Monday at the First Methodist church.

Rev. Larry Paxson, pastor, today announced the program for the groundbreaking services. The highlight will come when the audience attending responds with these words:

"We break this ground, O Lord. Amen." Every person with a shovel will be invited to turn ground at the same time at this point on the program.

Dr. F. Lee Wilshire, Methodist district superintendent, will take a prominent part on the program, giving the invocation, the prayer of dedication and benediction.

The ceremony is for starting construction of the church's enlargement building program, the result of a recent fund raising campaign. The Sunday School annex and enlargement of the building will cost around $40,000, church officials estimate.

Telephone Franchise Controversy Re-Tried

A retrial of the Valencia county district court hearing on the Belen city's contest of the franchise held by Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company was conducted yesterday afternoon at the courthouse in Los Lunas.

Described as only a formality, the new trial resulted from the death of the court reporter who took notes on the first trial. The reporter died before translating the record.

The district court ruled in favor of the city, holding that the phone company's franchise was no longer good. The telephone firm appealed the decision to the State Supreme Court.

FIRST UNITED METHODIST CHURCH OF BELEN CELEBRATES HALF A CENTURY OF COMMUNITY

Four young members of the church model the historical dresses they'll wear during the celebration. They're Missy Auge in a 1950s evening gown owned by Lois Nichols; Michelle Rael, 11, in a 1970s gown owned by her grandmother, Patricia Urban; Michell Merrell, 10, in a 1920s flapper dress owned by Dorothy Dillard; and Rebecca Armstrong, 11, in a 1939 dress made for Mira Anne Wease by her mother.

NEWS-BULLETIN STAFF WRITER

The Methodists banded together in 1909 to found their first church in Belen — days when people were beginning to arrive, attracted to the growing economic base of railroads and merchandising.

Ruby Waggoner, who's prepared a church history, notes that the church met in a small building lent by the Lutherans, then later in commercial buildings or the Masonic Hall.

The building on the corner of Third and Reinken was built in 1907 complete with a two-room parsonage upstairs.

"All the local churches including the early Lutheran and Methodist, which were both small, found it a struggle to support their organizations," Waggoner wrote. "All the churches had difficulty financially and many leaders ... worked for years for a union of all the Protestant organizations to form and organize a Belen Federated Community Church." That occurred in 1922 with all but the Baptist, Nazarene and Episcopal churches joining.

"By 1948, enough Methodist people had come into the Belen area, largely through employment by the Santa Fe Railroad, that a request was made to the district superintendent ... to begin the process of re-organizing the Methodist church in Belen," Waggoner wrote.

She said that the group rented a parsonage on Third Street, Robert Culp became the bell ringer and five families took turns being janitor since the new church couldn't afford one.

Through the years, the church added its copper-capped bell tower, stained glass windows and many new members.

Waggoner said she thinks the church has such a hold on people because, as an early pastor told the congregation, the idea is "to love God and not to be afraid of him. To me, a religion of love is a lot more important than any other."

The Rev. Jay Armstrong, the current pastor of the church, said, "Everyone seems to care for everyone else." He is the 17th pastor of the church during the last 50 years.

On Saturday, Oct. 17, at 10 a.m. the church will hold a tour of the city for anyone who hasn't been back for years. At 5 p.m., it will put on a fashion show followed by a banquet in the fellowship hall at 6 p.m. Former pastors will be invited to reminisce about their time here.

On Sunday, Oct. 18, a continental breakfast will be served at 9 a.m. At 10 a.m.,

50 years of faith

If you've lived in Belen for any length of time, you've got to know that some of the very nicest people in town are members of the First United Methodist Church of Belen.

I think it's because when you find that many people who are involved in something they truly believe in, something that dedicates itself to love and good, it will naturally attract people who shine.

I could say the same thing about many of the other congregations in town, but the reason I'm talking about the Methodists is because they're celebrating a birthday. The First United Methodist Church in Belen is 50 years old this weekend.

It's a church that's alive with projects and prayer groups and outings, that's reaching a hand out to the poor, that's living what it teaches.

It was fun to visit the church on Wednesday afternoon and watch all the activity, people trying on clothing from decades throughout the last century for a fashion show, watching kids working on a project, hearing a handful of boys explaining to an obvious newcomer what the baptismal font was.

So here's to Belen's First Methodist — may your next 50 years be as productive and holy as the last ones.

I thought I'd include here a list of the charter members. Some of them are deceased now, others remain active in the church. They'll make you reminisce.

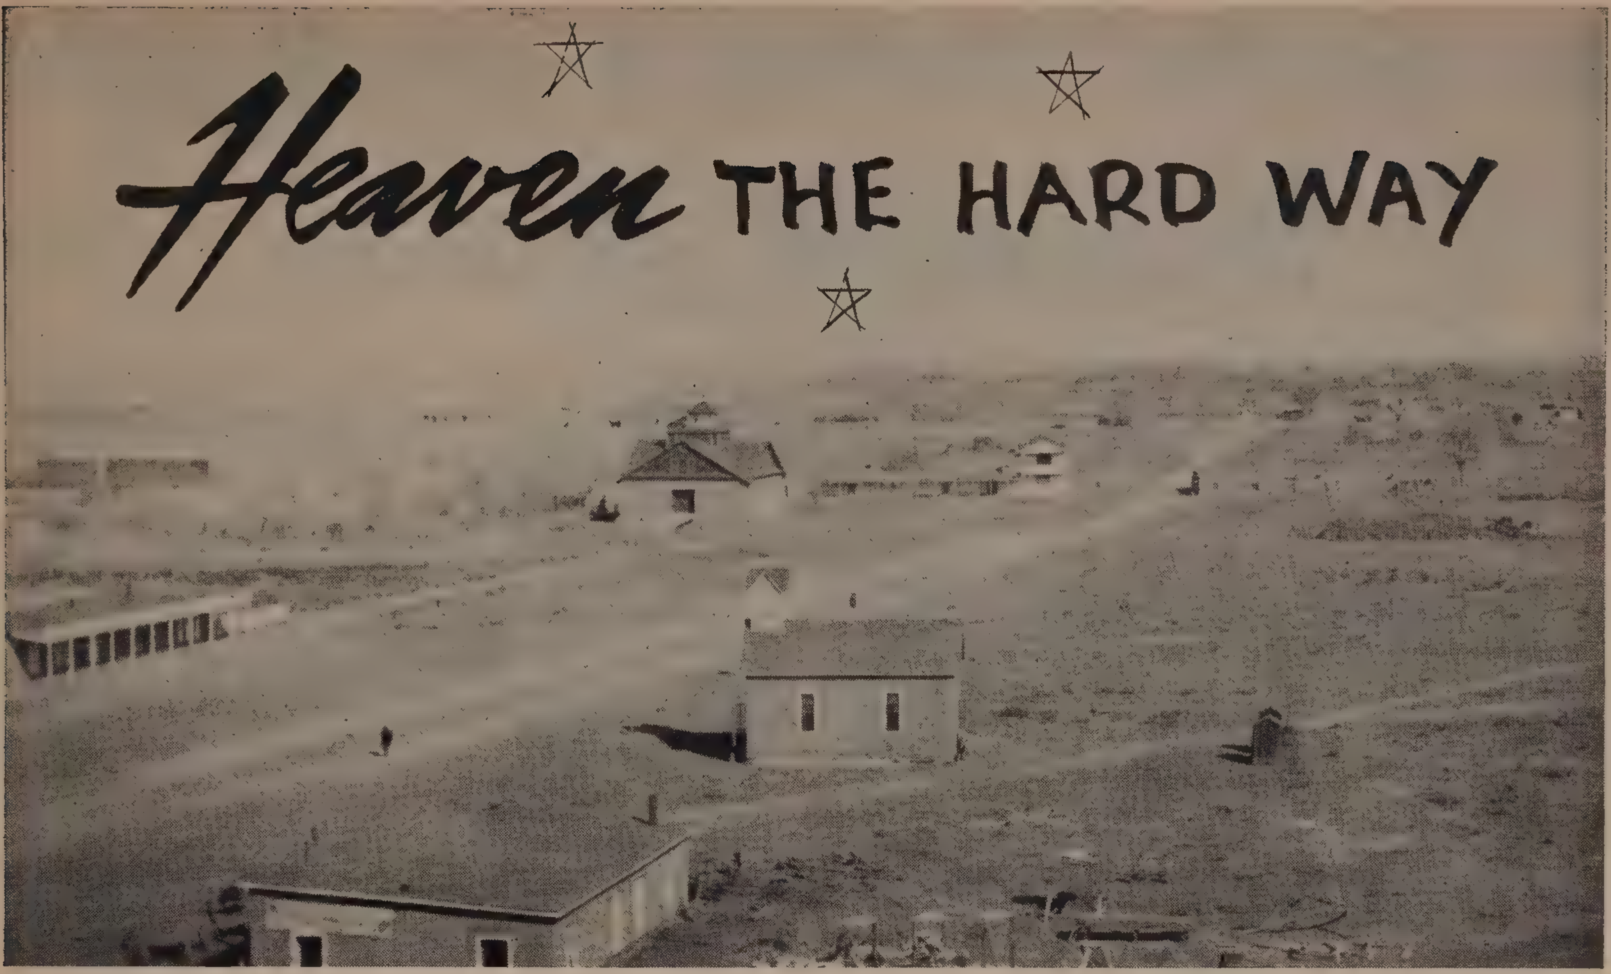
Heaven THE HARD WAY



Sixty years ago this little German Lutheran church was the only Protestant church between Albuquerque and Socorro.

By Veda Neville Conner

MY MOTHER used to tell how, for a few terrifying moments fifty years ago, she thought she'd ruined both herself and Billy Sunday's preaching suit. In her little Illinois town she'd spent weeks in frenzied preparation for the world-famous evangelist's visit. Then she shook a dirty rug down on his head as he passed in the street below.

She remembered in a flash tales of his fiery explosive temper and she wished wildly she'd been born Catholic instead of Methodist so she could go into a convent. But the square-faced man below only smiled benignly up to her through the dust, tipped his derby and passed on.

My mother little dreamed in her sedate, gas-lit, coal-ranged comfort of how her young contemporaries out in Belen, Territory of New Mexico, would have sniffed at calling that a catastrophe. Theirs was a frontier town in the Rio Grande Valley, and though its name might be Spanish for Bethlehem, their struggles were such that it often seemed a pretty unholy place.

In their isolation, church women of the Territory were at least fifty years behind their eastern sisters, and Billy Sunday himself was only a distant rumor to them. They were more concerned with some student-preacher at hand and how to pay him and build a church for him to preach in. And at a time when it hadn't rained on the corn or cattle for two years.

They coped with 100-miles-an-hour dust storms or blizzards fresh and strong from the Rockies on their nights of long-planned festivities. They knew raucous cowboys, tough railroad builders, puzzling Indians, bad gunmen. And there were the big, important, heart-wearying things: piñon wood cut too long for balky church cookstoves, canned milk that froze, kerosene lamps that smoked. And they'd have given it all up as quickly as they'd have given up their hope of Heaven.

In fact, forty-odd years ago in a Belen of less than a Building the cut-off route saved the day for Ladies' Aid president and secretary, Mrs. Laura Becker and Mrs. Clara Dalies.

Homestead Pioneers

By Zona Wyly as told to Ruth W. Armstrong

WHEN NEW MEXICO became the forty-seventh state in January, 1912, we were living on a farm in central Texas raising cotton, corn and other feed. Stories began to drift back about the fine land in northern New Mexico that the government had opened to homesteading to encourage settlement and development of the new state. Reports said there were real opportunities for anyone willing to work and endure the so-called hardships of pioneer life.

We were always ready for new adventure, so after some investigation we decided to cast our lot with the many others who were accepting the government's offer of three hundred and sixty acres of land. The requirements were that we live on the homestead at least seven months out of each year for three years, cultivate at least forty acres, and add improvements such as houses, barns, wells, and fences.

My husband, Hugh Wyly, and my sister's husband, Jess Jackson, went out in September, 1912, and filed claims in Colfax County. Ours was at the foot of beautiful Palo Blanco Mountain, thirty-five miles southeast of Raton, and eleven miles south of Capulin which was known as Deadman at that time. The extinct volcano, Mt. Capulin, is located very close to that little town, and it has since become a state monument. But Palo Blanco was my mountain. It became our friend and landmark. Many times during the years we lived there I found myself standing at the back door, gazing at it with affection and yet with awe, wondering at the majesty of God's handiwork.

Harvesting the oat crop the first year on the homestead at the foot of Palo Blanco. The man on the machine is Thomas J. Roberson. The man wearing the hat is Hugh Wyly.

After filing their claims the men returned to Texas to make preparations to move their families. In the early spring of 1913 they and two other men, Jim Ratliff and Ed Trosper who had also previously filed claims, chartered a railroad car, loaded it with household goods, farm implements, horses, buggies and wagons and started for the land of promise. We women and children followed soon afterward on a passenger train. I had two little girls then, Merle who was six and the baby, Corine.

We arrived in Des Moines on March 22, 1913. The men met us and we started immediately for the homesteads in a wagon. I'll never forget that day. A terrible sandstorm was blowing, and the wind was cold and raw. If I hadn't had any misgivings before about this venture, I will admit that I had a few that day as we drove across the prairie. We went to the home of my brother, Thomas J. Roberson, who had preceded us by a few months. His family was already established in their new home which was a very comfortable two-story building. Thomas had served two terms in the Texas legislature and a few years later was elected to the New Mexico legislature.

Fortunately for us there was a deserted homesteader's house nearby in which we lived until we could get our own built. The men got lumber for our houses by cutting logs on Pine Mountain a few miles west, and had them sawed by another homesteader who had a sawmill in the mountains. We built two large rooms with a cellar, and dug a well twenty to thirty feet deep which gave us an abundance of good water.

By the time we were established in our new home it was too late in the spring to prepare much land for planting, though we did sow some corn, oats and beans. The oats grew more than waist high in that lush virgin soil. An inch of snow fell the latter part of September before the oats were harvested, but it did no damage.

Harvest

(Psalm 149:3-4)

UPON the reservation fields, the hot winds flow: clouds
Gather but no rains appear, rather the heat intensified
And slow, burns through the sandy atmosphere, scorching
Even the cacti gaunt and drear; row-after-row,
The all-essential native corn droops low. The tribal
Folk look to the east, north, west, and south:
Sensing a growing need marked by long drouth.

Early the night of the young moon, by the bright flickering
Light of a great fire of dry pinon, in highly-secret Council,
A Clan made grave decision: acknowledging the One Great Spirit's power, the summoned members grew aware they should Perform their prayer-dance, and then soon thereafter,
The hoped-for showers would be sent from the Above: and once
Agreed on time and place, returned with eager heart
And lithesome step, each to his own hogan to hasten
Individual preparation:
Under the mystic spell of low-hung stars, throughout the hours
Of dawn, with grace and confidence, the task proceeded:
One-by-one the Clansmen danced; to the solemn chant
Of the Yeibechai, to pulsing throb of native drums, to rhythm
Of gourd rattles touched with paint, and tinkling silver bells
On copper-colored legs: and after, with measured, circling
Movement, in slow, awesome precision and deep reverence, marked
Prayerful steps together, until the lightening turquoise sky
Foretold the coming of the sun: thus was the good work done.

In the small desert town nearby, some wonder sparked
The white man's talk about the weather: every evening for one
Blithesome week, the rains fell gently down on the parched
Earth: the sand-verbena bloomed again, dry waterholes filled
Full to over-flowing: the blue corn and the white, the red corn
And the yellow, each raised its tasseled head. No one save
Those who had concurred in what to do, from Where swift help
To seek, knew anything at all: the redmen thought it wise
No word to speak: their own ancient traditions held it ever so:
Silently in beauty, the Great Spirit, the Above,
Blesses the below.

Tumbleweed

A rolling stone gathers no moss 'tis said
But how can a stone roll alone?
'Twould not be so strange were it said of the weed
That tosses and tumbles at the whim of a breeze.

Funny old sayings, they'd make little sense
Were it not so with humans, all unsettled and tense.

Art and Artists of New Mexico

By Ina Sizer Cassidy

Fortieth Annual Fiesta Show

THE fortieth annual exhibition of New Mexico artists, familiarly known as the Fiesta show because it is held in the same month as the Santa Fé Fiesta, opened at the State Art Gallery on Sunday, August 2, with a public reception by the Women's Board of the School of American Research and Museum of New Mexico. The show is to run through September 13 to give State residents plenty of time to visit it. One hundred entries from the Fiesta show will comprise the professional section of the State Fair Art Exhibit.

The Women's Board has been official hostess to every Fiesta show since its beginning forty years ago in one small room of the old Governor's Palace, with less than a half dozen artists from two towns, Taos and Santa Fé, showing. In today's show twenty-two towns are showing with one hundred and fifty-two artists represented, indicative of the growth and development of art in New Mexico.

The show has reached a high point of excellence, setting a worthy standard for future shows. It is well selected as to the various styles and is well hung, not so many pictures crowded together on the walls that the value of each one is obscured. It is not always numbers that count. Mass does not necessarily signify quality.

Following the prevailing manner in the art world today, that of labeling the various styles of art expression, the Fine Arts Department has designated, in the catalog, with definitions, six different styles of painting and sculpture: Objective, Non-objective, Expressionist, Abstract, Surrealistic and Decorative, which may be either abstract or objective, and observes: "The proportions of the several art styles represented this year stand close to those for the other two annuals since conversion to a selected exhibition. A slight trend away from the objective, however, may be noted." This is given as 60% this year as against 51% in the two previous exhbitions. This year there are no examples of Impressionistic, Fantasy, and Indian. This gain over the past years away from the objective style in New Mexico does not bring it up to the prevailing percentage in, for instance, the Great Western exhibition at Denver this summer, which includes artists from Chicago to the Pacific coast and Canada to the Mexican border, in which the percentage of advanced styles must be nearer 80% over the objective. New Mexico still likes the familiar. But the painting in the Great Western show was no better than our own.

For the 40th annual show the selection quotas were set at one hundred fifty paintings and fifty sculptures, according to the catalog, and these were selected from a total of three hundred entries, including twelve sculptures, only a fourth of the sculptures thousand people, thirty women would come to Methodist Ladies' Aid meeting by buckboard, buggy or on horseback from miles around, whereas eight may show up today. It was their recreation.

That recreation took on added zest in the Rio Grande Valley town the winter of 1910. For the young minister, Guy Cox, a health-seeker, had almost alone built a little adobe brick church complete with seats and pews. Mrs. P. P. Simmons, president, and her Ladies' Aid had never had a church before.

When Mrs. Simmons, then Fairy Virginia Pryde, came from Kansas in 1894, ox teams had sludged through mud or sand past a tiny adobe church near the Goebel store. This was the German Lutheran church, only Protestant church between Albuquerque and Socorro.

Mr. Simmons was clerk at John Becker's store, and the Becker, Scholle and Goebel families warmly welcomed them to the Lutheran chuch. But it wasn't the same. Fairy Virginia wistfully watched black-shawled Spanish ladies saunter past to ladies' affairs at mellowed Nuestra Señora de Belen. They'd been all set since 1793.

Then Methodist Reverend Ruoff began riding in from Mountainair, saddlebags bulging with communion and christening paraphernalia. Church and parsonage were the home in which he hung his wide-brimmed hat. There were four or five Methodist families there by then, Simmons, Campbell, Byers.

Eastern missionary money was likely to be sent out first to places with names known to Home missionaries. By the time any got to little Bethelem, New Mexico, it was almost sure to be a tiny trickle that would scarcely water a preacher's vegetable garden.

It's a mystery what pale, slender Guy Cox lived on while he built the church in 1909-10, but when it was finished, Missions upped their contributions a little. The ladies were so grateful they rashly promised $300 a year plus a $50 monthly salary for him. To make it worse, the old organ wheezed its last wheeze and the women said, sure, they'd get a piano too.

It all added up to about the limit in paid entertainment Belen could absorb that winter of 1910: sales, mock weddings, chicken pie suppers, bazaars.

The money didn't exactly roll in, but the ladies' faith was as bountiful as their numbers. They felt what they couldn't provide the Lord would. And the night of the chicken pie supper proved it.

The last hungry cutsomer had been fed only by scraping the last crispy brown bits from the last of the pans keeping warm around the big wood-burning heating stove. (There was no room in a 150-seat church for a cookstove.) The women, mentally counting their profits, were carrying dessert plates to a tired but chattering dishwashing crew behind a screen. The front door burst open and into the lamplight rushed what seemed like a hundred railroad men in off their run—there were actually twenty-five—joshing, scraping and rumbling into chairs, looking confidently at the stricken women and banging cheerfully on the tables for chicken pie.

Out of the flutter of women, stepping over each other in aimless activity, came the frantic whisper: "The boardinghouse! Mrs. Dils said she'd have chicken pie tonight just in case. Do you suppose—?"

A young blade with a horse and buggy tied out in front of a saloon was horrified when he was suddenly enjoined by a disheveled Mrs. Simmons: "You get out to that boardinghouse. If there's chicken pie, you bring it. And don't spare that horse!"

The ladies poured glass after glass of water, rattled pots and pans vigorously, and took stealthy turns at the back door listening for hoof beats and buggy wheels in the night.

Then the boardinghouse lady—and the Lord—came through.

Guy Cox, still seeking health, went to Arizona, but his little church is the heart of today's Belen Methodist church, built snugly (Continued on Page 50)

Southwestern BOOK SHELF

LANDMARKS OF NEW MEXICO, by Edgar L. Hewett and Wayne Mauzy; School of American Research, Santa Fé, $4.50—This popular volume, first issued in 1940, is now out in its third edition, with a new format. "Landmarks" is something of a guidebook, but more than that, for it discusses history, archaeology, geography, ethnology. The book is profusely illustrated with black and white photographs and with one reproduction in color, that of the Kuaua mural frescoes, salvaged from the pueblo at Coronado State Monument, Bernalillo. The mural is considered by archaeologists to be "one of the most important archaeological finds ever made in the Southwest."

The new edition has been re-edited to bring the information up to date and to eliminate untimely references.

FLORENTINE CODEX, BOOK 3, Translated by Arthur J. O. Anderson and Charles E. Dibble; School of American Research and the University of Utah, $4.00—To undertake the current project of translating the Florentine Codez from Spanish and Aztec, Arthur J. O. Anderson, of the Museum of New Mexico staff, and Charles Ribble, of the University of Utah, first had to learn the Aztec language.

Then they tackled the microfilm of Fray Bernadine de Sahagún's manuscript, describing the civilization of the Aztecs.

While this scholarly work of 1,000 copies is intended mainly for libraries, collectors and scholars, it is novel, amusing and interesting to the casual reader as it describes the origin of the gods, with much information on customs, rituals, festivals, and intrigue among the Aztecs and Toltecs. Purists who complain about the frank writings of modern writers will find the Aztecs were quite plain spoken 600 years ago.

DESPERADOES OF NEW MEXICO, by F. Stanley; World Press, Inc., Denver, $6.00—F. Stanley, who has authored several books of history, mainly on towns and sections of New Mexico, such as Colfax county, Las Vegas, Fort Union, and Socorro, now turns his attention to the bad men of territorial days.

From old newspapers, periodicals and court documents, F. Stanley has compiled the stories of 17 desperadoes, including Billy the Kid, Dick Brewer, Dave Rudabaugh, Clay Allison, Joe Fowler, Vincente Silva, Black Jack Ketchum, and others less well known.

There is a lot of exciting reading in this 17-chapter book in which the author perpetuates a lot of the old legends and mixes in some new material that he has dug up as he has pursued his researches into frontier New Mexico history. One of the desperadoes managed to live long enough to die with his boots on from natural causes. But most of them lived—and died—by the gun.

Desperadoes has been issued in a limited edition of 800 copies. Most of these will undoubtedly find their way into the collections of Southwestern aficionados.

The name Apache is said to be a Zuñi word meaning "enemy." It was given those Indians by the Spanish colonizer, Oñate, in the 16th century.

TOUGHEST OF THEM ALL, by Glenn Shirley; The University of New Mexico Press; Albuquerque, $3.50—A collection of stories of some of the colorful characters of the Old West: Frank Eaton, who was known as Pistol Pete; Temple Houston, the gun-lawyer son of the Texas liberator; Kate Bender, the prairie vampire; Cherokee Bill, the "toughest of them all," and several others of the Billy the Kid era. The author is a Stillwater, Okla., police captain, who has been writing western and detective fiction and non-fiction for a number of years.

Folk Art Museum Opens

Public opening of the Museum of International Folk Art in Santa Fé is scheduled for September 5.

This museum is the fifth building to be added to the physical plant of the museum of New Mexico. It is located on State lands adjacent to the Laboratory of Anthropology in Santa Fé. It has become a reality through the vision and generosity of Miss Florence Dibell Bartlett. As of the time of its opening it has collections of Folk Art from over fifty foreign lands. World conditions permitting, the Museum expects to operate on a broad international basis.

The building itself, designed by John Gaw Meem and Associates, is said to be the principal art museum of the 50's and a distinguished modern.

Equipment, furnishings, and appointments are of the most modern type. The building was planned for flexibility in presentation of display material. The small auditorium can accommodate stage presentations of various types, or can be used for temporary exhibits.

To further international connections of the Museum, an International Folk Art Foundation has been organized. It is designed to assist in activities connected with collecting, research, and publication, and to make possible the receipt of private benefactions.

A round table discussion and open forum on the subject of primitive, folk, and fine arts is scheduled for the evening of September 5 in St. Francis Auditorium at the Art Gallery. The famous anthropologist, Dr. Ralph Linton, will preside.

An old mine, the Chalchilhuitl, in the Cerrillos Hills near Santa Fe, shows the workings of pre-historic Pueblo Indians who mined with stone hammers and axes.

dark snowy yards of the newly built railroad. Some section man yelled to stragglers in the snow: "What goes?" "Oyster stew," came back the muffled cry.

Ladies leisurely dipping stew for a handful of quiet customers and sadly munching fried oysters suddenly found themselves unable to fill brimming bowls fast enough for men who'd been swinging sledge hammers in the cold all day. Bottoms of big kettles were soon looming up. But by then a stranded traveling man from the hotel had discovered the white elephants and was holding a loud hilarious auction in the next room. Railroaders joined in to bid on—and buy—every jimcrack in the room at shameful scalpers' prices.

Exhausted, happy church ladies jogged home behind weary horses through a clearing night to the jingle of $500 in cold cash in the till.

Clara's husband, Paul Dalies, told them they didn't know trouble. When he'd come to Socorro in 1889, they were still talking about how gunmen had shot up the newspaper editor in the Methodist Church nine years before. He'd fallen dead in the doorway while the church ladies had been standing around congratulating themselves on a perfect Christmas Eve party.

He'd also seen the Belen Lutheran Church built in 1894 with adobe blocks for seats. It was a school also, and church ladies, like the pupils, brought their loads of wood for the stove when they held meetings or other affairs, carried out ashes, and swept out the place. Reverend Mathieson, Presbyterian circuit-rider of the Rio Grande Valley, included this Lutheran Church in his preaching itinerary.

When the new church was dedicated in 1911, the little church was made into a house. An addition had to be built on to make it big enough. The cupola, sans bell, was set out back of it. Although the house still stands, a bathroom was eventually installed in it, and the cupola is no more.

Paul Dalies, the John Becker clerk, is today vice-president of the company and Louis C. Becker is president of his bank. P. P. Simmons recently retired as Becker-Dalies vice-president.

Among surviving church women who recall those times of challenge—and of laughter—are Laura Becker, Fairy Simmons, Alice Campbell, Lottie Byers. They insist Belen's unusually wide streets came about through things remembered.

One such memory was a dark and moonless night around forty-five years ago. A little church lady started down the sandy wagon road to a church bazaar. She carried a fancy, homemade apron to be sold—she hoped. She never arrived.

Buying and selling were going on briskly when two of the women could stand their anxiety no longer. If a woman didn't show up for anything so exciting as a bazaar, something was seriously amiss.

Donning shawls, they picked their way down the dark lumpy road, slowing every few steps to listen. Then came soft scurrying, and whimpering sounds, ahead. Coyotes? They stopped dead.. There, somewhere close by in the darkness, was the missing church lady, scrambling all over the sides of the irrigation ditch she'd fallen into. She was wailing: "I can't find my apron!" Mrs. Simmons still puzzles: "I don't know why she missed the road. She had her lantern."

Apron and lantern, fitting symbols for women who so long ago in Bethlehem sought Heaven the hard—and happy—way.

The burial place pointed out by Major Teel was then a garden owned by Sofre Alexander who objected to having the guns dug up because to do so, he said, would destroy his plantings of chile and alfalfa. To restrain the diggers he applied for an injunction, but Judge William D. Lee, a Union army veteran, declined the request on the ground that no irreparable damage would be suffered. "Besides," he confided, "Sofre, I'm curious myself about those cannon." The guns were unearthed and divided between the Albuquerque town government and the Colorado Historical Society. Heaven the Hard Way

The east-west cut-off railroad route came in 1903 and joined Belen to the main line of the Santa Fe that circled west, north of town. It brought in people and money and benefited church treasuries. It almost brought the Methodists the shame of being advertisers without the goods. It was to prove a blessing to Lutheran ladies in distress in 1910. But that cut-off always was a blessing or a curse, according to how you looked at it.

Rough laborers, the inevitable professional gamblers, rollers and gunmen came with it. In 1903, before she married Louis C. Becker, First National Bank cashier, and became president of the Lutheran Ladies 'Aid, Laura Zinth worked on the John Becker books every night until nine. Then she walked a trembling gamut of thirteen saloons to her sister Clara Dalies' house, gun in pocket. High adventure for a girl from sober Wisconsin.

A few of the railroad workers and some of the cowboys in from vast cattle and sheep ranches were pretty well-mannered on occasion. In stiff-collars and polished-boots, they'd sidle in to a Lutheran box supper in the farther end of town from the saloons' tinny pianos. There they would suddenly and shyly bid ten dollars on a box of fried chicken, crusty homemade bread and angel food cake not worth a penny over seventy-five cents. Cold food, tied up in rare cardboard boxes with rarer ribbon, was a dodge for the church women, easier to negotiate than hot foods and moving seats around in a 2 x 4 church.

The Belen Lutheran ladies, like the Methodists, managed to have church activities before they ever had a church. Services were being held in 1885, and their church was built in 1894. Also like the Methodists, they had a night when the cut-off figured largely in a church supper. But their dilemma was the reverse—with not enough customers and too many oysters.

This supper was an annual affair and one of the biggest events of the social season for Belen and surrounding Rio Grande country—and a shot in the arm of about $200 to the ladies' strong box.

In those days oysters were ladled wet and dripping from kegs in which they'd been railroaded across a continent from some eastern bay.

An east wind from the Manzanos was already beginning a mournful howl and specks of snow were dotting the grey February sky when Mrs. Laura Becker, president, and Mrs. Clara Dalies, secretary, and their Ladies' Aid began carrying supplies into the Heyday Club building. Their adobe church was far too small for such an affair. They lugged dozens of oil lamps, water, piñon wood, silver, bowls and soup kettles, pounds of dime-sized oyster crackers, cans of condensed milk.

By the time all was in, long skirts and petticoats had to be wrung out and flapped dry by the hot stove. For the wind, beating across the sand flats and around the mesas of unprotected Belen, carried a freezing mixture of sand and snow.

Miss Bertha Rutz, who had opened a hotel when the building of the cut-off began, presided with authority of an inn-keeper over the oysters, frying some in puffy brown balls. When she announced the stew was ready to serve, snow was driving to mountainous drifts. Operation blizzard was battering the town like nothing in years.

You can't turn back, not with gallons of oysters in the hold that will have an odor all their own this time tomorrow come a thaw. The ladies waited, they hardly knew what for. They wandered disconsolately into the salesroom with its big table of white elephants. No one would have bought the discarded pincushions, paper roses, plaster statues and the like, but sad smiles fell on what the ladies had hoped would bring gay laughter.

Little crowds of townspeople puffed in, red and cold, to look sympathetically at the ladies and hungrily at the stew. They well knew the women didn't depend on them but on crowds from Tomé, Peralta, Los Lunas, the Valley.

But a long line of bunkcars sat over in the Anyone interested may contact Waggoner at 864-8785 or the Rev. Carl Treat, pastor, at 864-6095 or 864-4575.

Scholarship Deadline Set

LOS LUNAS — A $100 scholarship will be presented by the Alpha Beta chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Society International to a girl graduate of Belen High School, who is enrolled in a New Mexico university at the sophomore or above level, majoring in education.

The local group, which includes women educators in this area, gives an annual scholarship, alternating between Belen and Los Lunas High School graduates.

Last year, Denise Gallegos of Los Lunas, a student at the University of New Mexico, was the recipient.

Anyone, who meets the qualifications and is interested in applying, may call Celine Archuleta at 865-7464 or Mary Wingerd at 865-4592.

Applications must be received by April 1, according to Mrs. Archuleta, scholarship committee member.

The Formula

This example was given by Dr. James Williams of NMSU at the hearing in Federal Court last week during testimony taken on possible violations of the 14th amendment to the U.S. Constitution, caused by the recent reapportionment by the New Mexico State legislature.

1. Assume there is a county with 100 people, according to census figures.
2. The county has four precincts with 25 people living in each precinct.
3. 20 people voted in the county in the last general election.
4. The breakdown of voters in the precincts was: No. 1, 10; No. 2, 5; No. 3, 5; No. 4, 0.
5. The total population is divided by the number of voters (100 divided by 20) which leaves a factor of 5.
6. That number, 5, is multiplied by the number of votes cast in each precinct.
7. That means, that for the purposes of drawing legislative boundaries, the precincts have the following number of people: No. 1, 50; No. 2, 25; No. 3, 25; No. 4, 0.

Williams said minorities can't be properly represented under this formula, used by the state since 1963, because legislative boundaries will not accurately reflect actual population.

Minute for Mission, January, 2024

Last month we introduced you to one of the pioneers of this church, Jean Elizabeth Moore. Today I'd like to talk about two other pioneers, who are also memorialized in our stained-glass windows, Phillip Simmons and Fairy Simmons. Who were they?

I found an article that appeared in the September 1953 issue of "New Mexico Magazine". I want to read a little of that article. It begins:

In 1900, Belen was a frontier town in the New Mexico Territory. Though its name might be Spanish for Bethlehem, its struggles were such that it often seemed a pretty unholy place.

In spite of this, in 1905 Methodist Reverend Ruoff began riding in from Mountainair, saddlebags bulging with communion and christening paraphernalia. Church and parsonage were wherever he hung his wide-brimmed hat. At the time, there were just four or five Methodist families here. Church women of the territory were more concerned with the preacher at hand and how to pay him and build a church for him to preach in, even though at a time it hadn't rained on the corn or cattle for two years, and they coped with 100 mile-an-hour dust storms and blizzards. They also coped with raucous cowboys, tough railroad builders, puzzling Indians, bad gunmen. Nevertheless, in a Belen of less than a thousand people, soon there were 30 women who would come to Methodist Ladies' Aid meetings by buckboard, buggy, or on horseback from miles around. It was their recreation. That recreation took on added zest in the winter of 1910. Their new young minister, Guy Cox, had almost singlehandedly built a little adobe brick church complete with seats and pews. Mrs. Philip Simmons, otherwise known as Fairy Simmons, was president of the Ladies Aid then, and they had never had a real Methodist church before.

When Mrs. Simmons, born Fairy Virginia Pryde, came here from Kansas in 1894, ox teams had sludged through mud or sand past a tiny adobe church near the Goebel store. That was the Lutheran Church, at the time the only Protestant church between Albuquerque and Socorro. Phillip Simmons was a clerk at John Becker's store, and the Becker, Scholle, and Goebel families warmly welcomed the Simmons to the Lutheran church. But it wasn't the same. The Simmons were Methodists. So when the Methodist Church was built here, they started attending, and they never stopped.

It's a mystery what Pastor Cox lived on while he built that first Methodist church in 1910. The ladies of the church were so grateful that they rashly promised to pay him $300 a year, plus a $50 monthly salary. Then, to make things worse, the old organ wheezed its last wheeze and the women said, sure, they would get a piano, too. How did they do all that? It all added up to about the limit in entertainment Belen could absorb that winter: rummage sales, mock weddings, chicken pie suppers, bazaars.

Does this all sound familiar? We still put on sales, concerts, dinners, and bazaars today. It's what Methodists have always done. We do what we need to do to keep the church going, through good times and bad.

Phillip Simmons eventually retired as a vice president of the Becker-Dalies Company. He was also an officer of the First National Bank of Belen. He died in 1954 at age 89. Fairy Simmons died in 1961 at age 89. The Simmons are just some of the people we remember in our stained-glass windows. We are indebted to all the pioneers of our church who worked hard and gave us so much.

Thanks be to them, thanks be to God, and thanks to you for listening.

Evan Davis (E-mail IHSF@zia.net.com) called for information about the Episcopal Church in Belen. The time he is interested in is 1910 when the land in Belen was donated. (I don't think this is the church and land that is in Rio Communities in 2015, I looked it up on line where it mentioned the original church was in the town of Belen, could be the same?)

Ernest C Zweiger

The following men were affliated with the church in 1910.
E.C Zweiger Ziegler E. Ruth Teacher
H.C Pendleton
William L. Brun✓ 1903 Jose E. Chaves 1916 Jose Chavez 2
Jose' Chavez
Jacques Horner
M.E. Rigny Freeland Rigney 2nd
Oscar Lefferine

He is putting together a presentation and cannot find any information. I mentioned that he could call UNM. He was asking for newspapers in 1908-1911 so I suggested he ask UNM and check on line. I looked in the gray boxes that we have at the HH and there is no information about the Episcopal Church. I also said you would be in Wednesday and Thursday.

If you have any information about the 1908-1911 era of the Episcopal Church, especially about the land being donated by Chavez he is quite interested in that fact. This is much later than the Filipe Chavez era.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

Belen, New Mexico

Dear Friend:

We are drawing near the close of another Conference year, and as we look back, we must admit the Lord has blessed us. We have had fifty-nine additions to our church membership, and each department of the Church is better organized than before.

I, as your pastor, must express my thanks to each member of the Church, and expecially to the Members of the Board for their splendid help and cooperation in all things.

We have had a good year financially and have been able to reduce our debt $2,500 as well as take care of our other expense. We will need $1,500 before Annual Conference so that we can have a clear slate to start a new year.

There will be no financial drive and no one will call on you for money. We feel that, when we present this need to you, that you will respond as you have in the past and our Church will go over the top for Christ and his Kingdom. Each of us will have to take our share, no matter how large or how small, in order to meet this goal. WE ARE COUNTING ON YOU.

Let us fill the Church Sunday and each Sunday thereafter--that we may renew our own spirits and more, to help others.

Yours in Christ,

Clayton Johnson, Pastor

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH
Box 455
Belen, New Mexico

Dear Members and Friends:

We are starting a new Conference Year and we must make our plans ahead of time. You will notice the enclosed budget for this Conference Year. It has been approved by the Board of Stewards and the Quarterly Conference.

Our budget is $284 less than last year but we will need the help of each member to make that budget work. We ask you to study this budget and to take your share of the burden.

Our pastor does not take the time of the pulpit to discuss the finances of the Church. For this we are glad. We believe that this year our people will respond to the need of Christ and his Church as they did last year. We need your statement of intention or pledge that we may know how to plan for the year.

When you make your pledge to the Church, it is not a legal instrument. At any time you feel the need, you may change your pledge or cancel it.

We live in hopes that each one of us will learn the value of TITHING, and give in proportion as the Lord has blessed us.

We feel that our Church has done wonders for Christs' Kingdom in this community and, with your help, we will do even more this year.

Very truly yours,

Finance Committee

Gentlemen:

In your letter of May 7 you stated you expected your funds to be available in "a few weeks" to take care of your account.

It is nearly the middle of June and these March and April charges are still outstanding.

May we please have your check, or at least an indication as to when you expect to be able to take care of the account.

Very truly yours,
